

When the old priest was gone, いっきゅうさん and the other trainee monks went to his room and ate みずあめ.

いっきゅうさん was working in a temple in Kyoto, training to become a Zen Buddhist monk.

After they ate up みずあめ, they got scared of what they had done. いっきゅうさん, however, told the others not to worry.

いっきゅうさん looked into an old priest's room and saw him secretly feasting on みずあめ.

いっきゅうさん shut the door and started messing up the room.

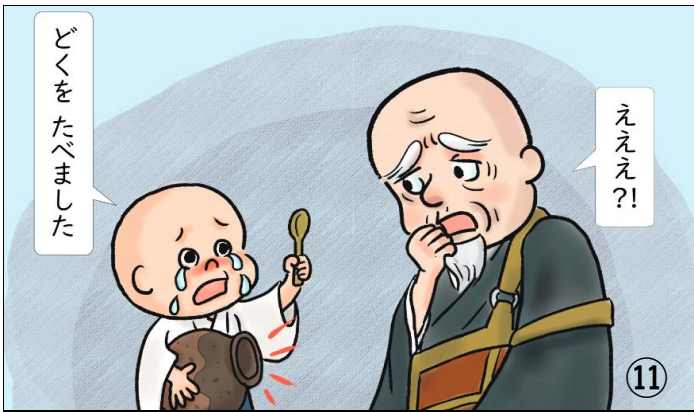

いっきゅうさん asked the old priest to give him some too, but he refused, saying that it was poisonous for children.

The old priest came back and was shocked to find いっきゅうさん crying loudly in the chaotic room.

いっきゅうさん told that the other trainee monks what the old priest said to him, but they were all sure it was みずあめ.

いっきゅうさん said that he had broken something while cleaning the room, so he ate the poison to avoid being scolded.

いっきゅうさん hatched the idea to teach the old priest a lesson.

The old priest had to confess that he lied about みずあめ and had been caught by いっきゅうさん.

The next morning, the old priest went out for the day.